“ I had the pleasure of meeting Scott nine years ago when I started working at Allied. The man set the bar pretty high in terms of who you want as a friend, as a coworker, as a father figure, and as a brother. I have never met someone who came close to his level. I have so many fond memories I can't single one out. Every summer it was Cubs games on the radio. Every winter it was Black hawks games.. We would spend entire shifts listening for one song. It was 'the tower' by a band named Angel. We heard it once in seven years and he ran across the shop to turn it up. When he got the Z he would tease me when he washed it. If I washed the wheels I could go for a ride. Haha for four years I washed those wheels and got one ride haha.. Everyday he talked about his family and his sons and buds and ginger. We talked so much I can't figure how we got any work done. He truly loved all of you. I always used to say that I live vicariously thru Scott.. We watched for the space station to flyby the shop. He had me play Call of duty once. I kept getting killed in a shed and couldn't get out. He laughed so hard he turned purple haha. Scott truly was the best friend I ever had. Scott will always be thought of and loved as brother to me.

“ I remember Scott as a little boy who always had to bug us girls (Hope, Myself, and Val). He could be an angel and a devil all at the same time. As he grew older he was always a very sweet boy who would give you his last cookie (after he had a bite). You grow up and grow away but the memories will stay forever. RIP Scotty
